Secretary
United States Department of Agriculture

RE: Support for the National Organic Program and Preserving Its Workforce

Secretary Rollins,

As leaders in the organic industry, we write to strongly support the National Organic Program (NOP) staff and its mission of ensuring consumer confidence in the USDA organic seal, one of the most trusted labels in the marketplace. The expert NOP staff members working across the country are critical to protecting the integrity of the seal. They work to ensure compliance with USDA organic rules, develop and update policies that support farmers and U.S. based agriculture, and audit organic imports to prevent fraud, among other important duties. These dedicated professionals are on the frontlines of upholding the standards that give the USDA organic label its meaning—and its value—in the eyes of consumers. Their duties are essential to the vitality of our industry and consumer trust in the program. NOP operates efficiently and effectively on just $23 million annually but oversees a more than $70 billion industry. Reductions in staffing would jeopardize thousands of farms and businesses that rely on NOP's fair enforcement and fair markets.

Organic is a unique marketplace—one enabled and strengthened by regulation. Unlike most sectors, we have voluntarily sought out government oversight to ensure strong standards and consumer trust. Robust NOP staffing is needed to implement rigorous oversight and enforcement of the largest global organic market and protect investments made by the more than 28,000 domestic certified organic operations. More than 80 percent of U.S. households are choosing to pay a premium for certified organic products. Driving this consumer trend is a desire for healthy diets, reduction of food additives and synthetic inputs, and value-based purchases aligned with the healthy American food movement.

We understand that well-run organizations must evolve to improve efficiency; however, given the value the NOP provides to farms and businesses, any reductions should be thoughtful and targeted, not broad or indiscriminate. The NOP staff serve American farmers and businesses by providing a range of essential services. The Standards Division fulfills the statutory requirements of the Organic Foods Production Act and regularly updates and revises organic regulations, including deregulatory actions. The Accreditation Division accredits certifiers both domestically and abroad, ensuring that all certified operations—whether in the U.S. or internationally—are held to consistent standards. The International Division manages trade arrangements and international data collection, supporting both enforcement efforts and expanded global market access. Organic trade grew by 18 percent in 2024 and continues to show strong potential in new and emerging markets. The Compliance and Enforcement Division investigates fraud, with a particular focus on preventing bad actors in international trade from exploiting the U.S. organic market, American farmers and American businesses. Finally, the Office of the Deputy Administrator oversees programs that improve efficiency, such as the Organic Integrity Database and the Organic Integrity Learning Center, which provide critical technical support to farmers and businesses entering the organic marketplace.

The return on investment is substantial—every $1 invested in NOP staff and operations yields over $3,000 in retail value for the U.S. economy. NOP staff are essential to the continued growth of the organic market, the fastest growing agricultural sector. Consumer demand for organic products also far exceeds current domestic supply, presenting a clear opportunity for American farmers and rural communities. Please help our industry continue to thrive and be a success story by protecting these vital members of the government workforce.

Sincerely,

Matthew Dillon and Tom Chapman
